Concept of “Equity-mindedness”

- Equity-mindedness is “cognitive frame” or mental map of attitudes and beliefs.
- Reflects an awareness of the sociohistorical context of exclusionary practices in higher education and frames racial inequity as a dysfunction of higher education’s policies and practices.
- Developing equity-mindedness requires shifting beyond “diversity-mindedness” and “deficit-mindedness”.

Racial Equity Imperative

EQUALITY
imagines an equal world.
"I care about all students equally"

As racial equity requires policies and practices directed where they're needed to try hard to achievement and provide the necessary support. When colleges focus solely on diversity, they bring forward systems that put too many students at predictable odds toward failure.

Step Up and Lead for Equity: What Higher Education Can Do to Reverse Our Deepening Divides

- Equality is about sameness; it focuses on making sure everyone gets the same thing.
- Equity is about fairness; it ensures

Step Up and Lead for Equity: What Higher Education Can Do to Reverse Our Deepening Divides

Does Your Institution Do the Following?

1. Know who your students are and will be.
2. Have frank, hard dialogues about climate for underserved students with a goal of effecting a paradigm shift in language and actions.
3. Invest inculturally relevant practices that lead to success of underserved students—and of all students.
4. Set and monitor equity-minded goals—and allocate aligned resources to achieve them.
5. Develop and actively pursue clear vision and goals for achieving the high-quality learning necessary for careers and citizenship, and therefore essential for a bachelor's degree.
6. Expect and prepare all students to produce culminating or Signature Work at the associate (or sophomore) and baccalaureate levels to show their achievement of Essential Learning Outcomes

Online learning during COVID-19: ways to ensure equity and access

Challenges with Online Learning

- Lack of bandwidth and/or equipment
- Unstable housing or homelessness
- Lack of technological skills and digital literacy
- Language and cultural barriers
- Personalized accommodation and support

Online Learning during COVID-19: 8 Ways Universities Can Improve Equity and Access

1. Create accessible materials

- Share documents and materials that are compatible with assistive technologies; provide descriptions in hyperlinks and images for students with visual impairments using screen readers; format text in easily readable colors and fonts; provide course content materials in multiple formats.

2. Choose adequate digital technologies

- Choose tools that include accessibility features, such as text-to-speech, high-contrast themes, enlarged cursors, closed-captioning, keyboard shortcuts and alternative text.

3. Record lectures, and caption videos and audio content

4. Adopt inclusive culturally responsive teaching

- Instill equity as a value in designing learning experiences and avoid one-size-fits-all instructional designs; be aware of the risks of a “color blind” approach as claiming not to see race may mean ignoring racism or discrimination; design courses to activate students’ cultural capital.

5. Adopt a flexible approach to student participation
 - Discontinue traditional 3-hour lectures; give priority to project-based assignments to promote asynchronous participation; provide additional time for completing exams.
6. Ensure financial support and equipment
7. Understand student needs
 - Host panels with student organizations to learn about their new reality, their needs and what they want faculty to know; administer ongoing surveys to monitor students' situations
8. Address systemic racism
 - Staff noted that there is more work to be done in providing

Anti-Racism in Higher Education

- Presents a model for change that distributes leadership and institutional power across racial lines
- Diversity initiatives have failed to educate about the reality and prevalence of white dominance and supremacy on campuses
 - The focus has been on merely changing individuals rather than dismantling structural inequalities that perpetuate systemic racism
- This removes blame of academic failure from the education system and places it on the individual and/or subgroup.

Anti-Racism in Higher Education

Sharing Power

- Increasing the percentage of people of color holding leadership positions
- Current leadership must very intentionally create an ecosystem in which emerging leaders' identities are recognized and celebrated
